

GENERAL DESCRIPTION

This document provides a general description of sections and offices in the ctXIII building.

HUMAN CENTERED SYSTEM LABORATORY

The Human Centered System Laboratory (HCS) is an innovation hub focused on collaboration. It is equipped with desks, computers, areas for mobile device charging, boards, and other materials supporting the development of computational robotic systems.

The laboratory is directed by Dr. Anselmo Frizera Neto, working with research assistants Elio Triana, Matheus Penido, Igor Bautista, and Dr. Fabiana Machado. A wide door on the west side connects the lab to the Main Corridor, enabling seamless interaction among researchers and academics.

MAIN CORRIDOR

The Main Corridor serves as the building's primary passageway, connecting various offices and facilities. Doors along the corridor provide access to essential areas, including the Human-Centered Laboratory and the North Offices. The corridor is equipped with fire extinguishers and alarm points for safety.

CAFETERIA AREA

The Cafeteria Area, located in the southwestern section, is a welcoming space for relaxation and social interaction. It serves as a meeting spot and rest area where students and researchers can share meals, engage in social activities like board games, or prepare drinks using the available coffee maker and other amenities. The cafeteria connects to the Main Corridor via a spacious door.

HALLWAY TO BATHROOMS

This hallway, situated in the southern section, provides access to bathrooms, including facilities for individuals with disabilities. It also features a water dispenser. Designed for functionality and accessibility, the hallway connects seamlessly to the Main Corridor through an open entryway.

SOUTHWEST LOBBY

The Southwest Lobby is a bright, spacious area in the southwestern corner of the building. It functions as a meeting and relaxation space and serves as the anteroom to the main entrance. Emergency kits and alarms are located here for safety purposes. The absence of an east wall allows smooth integration with adjacent areas.

SOUTHEAST LOBBY

The Southeast Lobby, located in the southeastern corner, complements the Southwest Lobby. It offers a calm atmosphere and includes a storage closet for cleaning supplies, access to a stairway leading to the second floor, and an elevator. The space connects to the Main Corridor through a doorless entry.
